WASHINGTON, D. C., OCT. 17, 1885

THE ILLUSTRATED DAILY

There are some very intelligent per ple, but their number is continually growing less, who cannot quite recor cile themselves to the illustrated dally newspaper. It is an innovation which they are slow in adjusting to their oldfashloned ideas, or rather they fall in readily adapting their old-fashioned ideas to a new order of things; and so far as their prejudices are based upon the crude, grotesque or pointless clear ncter of the pictures with which, we are poraries disfigure their columns, Tita

sorry to say, too many of our contem-

Carric fully agrees with them. It should be remembered, however that the art-for art it certainly is-o illustrating the current news of the day contemporaneously with its occurrence of producing rapid portraitures of persons and events, of making the wit of the press more racy and its satire more effective by aid of the artist's pencil, is of comparatively recent date, far from perfection and by no means appreciated at its true worth.

Hence the frequent poverty of realistic cleverness in the newspaper sketches of the period; but this is m reason for their universal condemnation. Better and better talent is all the time callsting in this work. Great Improvements are constantly going on in the mechanical processes by which pleture-making may be made to keep pace with type-setting; and more than this, most of the leading dailles of the coun try are adopting what our unreconciled friends regard as an innovation. An innovation it is, but one that is finding wide and sympathetic response on the part of the general reader. It lends a graphic charm to the columns of his paper in the same refreshing sense that a picture brightens the pages of a book of travel; makes welcome the dullest volume and relieves even the drear monotony of a dictionary.

It is an art which may be perverted to absurd uses and irrational concelts, the same direction with an enlightened public taste until in time the newspaper that lacks its illustrative features will be as rare as the monthly magazines or popular weeklies without them.

So let our old-fashioned friends fall into line and move with the inevitable procession. Their criticisms and protestations are more or less entitled to respect, but will be of no avail, excepting to stimulate the production of a better class of illustrations, such as from time to time adorn the column this paper. It is a great source of satisfaction to feel that in aptness of de sign and excellence of execution Top Chitic's embellishments far surpass those of many more pretentious journals, and are exerting a wholesome in fluence elsewhere in elevating the character of this branch of art. As there are sermons in stones and books in the running brooks, so there may be lessons well worth learning in the picture-galleries of the dally press.

THE press of New York has becomseriously mixed up, politically speaking Almost any kind of a politician, includ ing the various Mugwump breeds, can find some paper there that will suit his way of thinking. The Tribune will satisfy the most bitter opponent of the Administration and the most ardent wearer of the bloody shirt. The Democrat who stands by the Administration and the cause of his party generally can gather his inspiration from Mr. Dors heimer and his Star. The Republican civil-service reform man who likes the Administration tolerably well, but who wants to defeat Hill for Governor and at the same time has no use for the bloody garment, can at least three times a week find that the Harald is with him. Those who are out and out believers in the Administration, but want the Democratic ticket in New York defeated for the rather peculiar reason that such defeat would sustain the Administration, should buy the New York Times. The Democrat who supports the Administration, but at the same time wants the offices dis tributed right away among the members of his party, and who denounces the bloody rag as a revival of sec tionalism and grossly unjust to the South, can absorb the World The Republican or Democrat who has no very pronounced views, but likes to see a paper whacking around generally, will not get left if he reads the Sun. The Mugwump pure and simple can Post, Truly New York is a great city and the million-dollar Grant monumen fund promises in the course of several more months to reach $100,000. IN NEW YORK yesterday a sensation was caused in the petroleum market by a report that the Prince of Wales had become a speculator in that clusive commodity and was carrying 500,000 barrels of it. This is hardly probable. We do not believe that his shrewd ma would allow him to put any of his hard-earned salary in oil.

THE death of Baron Straithuarn focalls one of the most horrible expedients that have been employed in modern warfare. He had command of the Central Indian force during the Sepoy mutiny. Lord Clive was commander in chief of India. It was by the order of the Baron, then General

Hugh Henry Rose, that the captured Sepoy leaders were blown from the nouths of the connon. The edium onnected with that terrible punishnent has been divided between him and Lord Clive. And bistory shows the they were both entirely in Tayor of that namer of execution. death also recalls Lord McCaulay's graphic description of the tragedy.

New Publications Received. One of the most entertaining and in tructive books of the season is Mr. Charles Frederick Holder's "Marvels of Animal Life," published by Charles Scribner's Sons, volume originally appeared in Harper and Lippincoit, but it has been revised for the encilt of a wider field of realers, and pos-esses all the greater interest from having seen largely the result of the author's per-onal research. The book has been received

The "Brie-a-Brae Stories" for young peo ple, by Mrs. Burton Harrison, handsomely illustrated by Mr. Walter Grane, the Eng-lish artist, have just appeared from the press of Charles Seribner's Sons, and may be found at Benli's bookstore. It is a volume that will be in great demand during the holding season. he holiday season.

Mr. Reall is also in receipt of Harper's

The Pension Office "Rosses." EDITOR CRITIC: Wouldn't it be a good scheme to let one of the high-priced bosses of the new Pension Office go and hire an ditional laborer in his place? The idea of two men being, paid seventeen dollars a of two men being, paid seventeen dollars a day to bosa three or four laborers and mechanics is simply ridiculous, and makes it look rather top-heavy in the way of officers, to say the least. At the present rate of progress the building will not be in a habitable state this side of the next centennial. Why not employ some men and hustled the things so as to have it inclosed before winter sets in? It is a wonder, with the present dampness and draughts, that the eraphysics are not all laid on with the rheumaat dampases and draughts, that the em-loyes are not all laid up with the rheuma-ism, no doubt they will be shortly. Of ourse the bosses have no thought of nurs-on the lob so as to prolong their present at income, at the expense of the health not lives of the employes. Let them prove it, then, by putting on a sufficient force at sec, to get the building in shape so that will be safe to work in. OBSERVER. Washington, Oct. 17.

Canon Farrar's Lecture. rected Canon Farrar at the Congrega ional Church last evening and lister with profound interest and attention to his scholarly and well-delivered lecture on "Dante." Scoretary Hayard introduced Canon Farrar as "a distinguished citizen of the republic of letters and a loyal subject of an estimable queen," and expressed the gratitude and admiration which American readers and thinkers feel toward the great theologian. The lecturer read his notes without any preface and was calm and fluent in his delivery. The lecture was elequent in its simplicity and polished in its clearness and directness. It was both entertaining and instructive; narrative, criticism and description being blended with harmony and symmetry, and as a literary production the lecture was a remarkable success. Canon Farrar's theme to night will be "Robt. Browning and his poems." with profound interest and attention to his
